On the trial of the case, outside the alleged confessions, the testimony was circumstantial and the facts that Nardello had on two pairs of pants and had a cut on the finger, which the government claimed was made with his razor at the time of the homicide were relied on as evidence of guilt; also, the fact that after the homicide he had considerable money.

onymous letter signed "A Particular Friend of Nardello's," in which a conversation was given indicating that Nardello was innocent, and a second letter gave the names. In investigating this case they found not only the two witness. named, but others, and the result is the preparation of the affidavits, among which are the Annie Terry, of 337 Maryland avenue, de-oses that she knows Nardello as Frank Ross; that he was at Mrs. Francis Pochininis' frequently; he bought a good deal of beer; he had money and spent it freely; he was there Tues-day, July 28th, and under the effects of liquor; he had on two pairs of pants and he wore two pairs all the time; he had three fingers of his hand wrapped in a white cloth, on which there was blood, and also saw blood on his pants near the knee; he left about 10 o'clock. Hattie Freeman, living at the same place, corroborates Annie Terry, and further said she had seen Nardello with from $20 to $50 several

ALBAUGH'S OPERA HOUSE.-Signor Salvini was greeted with long-continued applause by a numerous audience when he appeared upon the stage last night in the costume of Nero, the gladiator. The Italian tragedian retains in all their fullness those splendid powers which have placed him easily first in this generation as an interpreter of heroic roles. His rare physical endowments—the grand physique, the su-perbly toned muscles, the rich, deep voice, and the wonderfully mobile face—have been devel-oped and trained with a broad intelligence and an entire harmoniousness that have produced dramatic individuality capable of the widest range of emotional expression and a force that seems hardly possible of overmatching. The tremendous force, spontaneity, and speaking grace of Signor Salvini's gestures are in them-selves a wonder and a delight. No less remarkselves a wonder and a delight. No less remarkable is the artistic discipline of his voice, whose power of expression is never at fault, and is full and resonant through all its range. Signor Salvini was frequently interrupted by irrepressible outburts of applause last night, and after each act was called before the curtain. Miss Viola Allen was an interesting Neodamia. Mr. Alexander Salvini, who gives many indications of being a not unworthy son of so emigent a being a not unworthy son of so eminent a father, made an excellent Flavian. This evening Signor Salvini appears in "Othello."

ceived a very flattering reception at the Na-tional last night from a large audience. Adam's opera, "Giralda," has a decided French flavor, which might prove startling in less artistic hands than those of the Ideals. The catching airs, which are an important factor in the success of most light operas, are lacking in this, but the concerted pieces and solos, some of them very difficult, were rendered last night with such care and ability as to call forth FOR SPECIAL BARGAINS look in the windows of the Family Shoe Store, 310 7th street north-lent voice and acted with exceptional skill, lent voice and acted with exceptional skill, while the chorus was very strong. Miss Marie Stone as Giralda entered with spirit into her role and sang delightfully. Miss Agnes Huntington made her first appearance here on the operatic stage, and added to the number of her Washington admirers. She made a dignified and stately Duchess. She sang magnificently. McDonald as Philip, Tom Karl as Don Manuel and Barnabee as Don Japhet were all good, of course. Herndon Morsell's capital acting as Dromez, the miller, was a feature of last night's performance.
